

Hi Parents and Students!

One of our hopes at next:gen High School is that our students will have opportunities to grow and learn together. So, this semester, we are bringing back and trying out an event called “Must Bring Homework.” In short, this is a High School study opportunity that mixes getting homework done in the context of community. Here is how it will work:

- Each Tuesday (with the current exception of September 11), we will meet at Black Rock on Linder/Chinden from 3-5p. We will usually get 2 of the big tables for our group.
- We will buy students their first medium coffee, but refills, other drinks, and food are on them.
- If a student comes, they must bring homework with them. This isn’t just a “hang out” time.
- Students will be expected to do homework during their time there.
- Students can come and go as needed—they don’t have to stay the whole time or come immediately at 3pm.

At 5p, Matt will need to leave, so plan on having your student picked up by then or be comfortable with them hanging out there until they are picked up from Black Rock.

Thank you! Let me know if you have any questions or concerns.

Matt
